Honorable Pat Whitaker,
President of the Senate.

Dear Sir:

The Commission respectfully submits herewith its report on the progress made in securing support for the proposed Atlantic, Gulf and Mississippi Canal.

The River and Harbor Act of 1927 authorized the preliminary examination and survey of the Cumberland Sound-Mississippi River route. The Chief of Engineers appointed a Special Board of Engineer Officers, consisting of the Gulf Division Engineer, as Senior Member, and the District Engineers at Jacksonville, Florida, Montgomery and Mobile, Alabama. This Board conducted public hearings in October, 1929, at New Orleans, at Mobile, and at Jacksonville. At the New Orleans hearing we had the strong support of the Board of Commissioners of the Port of New Orleans and Association of Commerce of New Orleans, the Georgia State Canal Commission, and others; at Mobile, we had the support of Pensacola, through its City Commission, and also by letters of personal endorsement of the project from Governor Bibb Graves and Secretary of State John Brandon, of Alabama, and others, which were filed with the Engineer Board; at Jacksonville, the Commission was represented by three members and Colonel Gilbert A. Youngberg, whom we employed to prepare the document which the Commission filed with Lieut. Colonel Mark Brooke, Senior Member of the Board, as Major General Harry Taylor, consulting engineer to the Commission, was ill and unable to attend the hearing.

The River and Harbor Act approved July 3, 1930, contained authorization for the examination and survey of several routes across Florida, the War Department to select the most feasible route for the cross-state Canal. Major General Lytle Brown, Chief of Engineers, added two more members to the Special Board in charge of making the examinations and surveys under the 1927 River and Harbor Act, and the personnel of this Board is now as follows: Colonel H. B. Ferguson, Division Engineer of the South Atlantic Division, Norfolk, Va., Senior Member; Lieut. Colonel Mark Brooke, Gulf Division Engineer, New Orleans; Lieut. Colonel J. V. Frazier, District Engineer, Jacksonville, Florida; Colonel W. D. A. Anderson, District Engineer, Mobile, Alabama; Major Douglas Weart, District Engineer, Savannah, Georgia, and Major Robert A. Sharrer, District Engineer, Montgomery, Alabama. It is expected that the Board's report may be filed at Washington in December of this year, or soon thereafter. The Commission will take such steps, on behalf of the State of Florida, as may be indicated at that time.

In 1927, and for several months thereafter (until his death), this Commission employed Major General Harry Taylor, of Washington, D. C., former Chief of Engineers, as Consulting Engineer, and he prepared, and we filed with the Engineers, strong arguments in favor of the canal across Florida, stressing the advisability of constructing it early, as, due to the rapid development of Florida, it will be increasingly difficult for the State to acquire the necessary right of way and land. He also stated that if this canal is not constructed, then there will be two separate inland waterway systems, on the Atlantic and on the Gulf coasts, with no channel to pass traffic to each other, and that the needs of commerce and navigation demand the construction by the Government of this cross-state canal. General Taylor also called attention to the enormous amount of tonnage moving over the few completed sections of the Texas-Louisiana Waterway, from New Orleans westward, and on the sections of the Atlantic Intercoastal Waterway, as showing that with the Florida Canal there would be a vast amount of trade develop between the states of the Mississippi Valley and the states along the Atlantic Coast, and that its construction would be justified; with the canal across northern Florida balanced freight will be assured, in ever increasing tonnage, throughout all future years. Congress has appropriated the money to build the Texas-Louisiana Canal, and work is proceeding. Congress has also appropriated $600,000 for the Pensacola-Mobile Canal, and it will be completed during the year 1933. The Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway is practically completed, with the exception of the canal across the state of New Jersey, which is now under re-survey, and the Florida East Coast Canal, which is under construction by the Government. This leaves only the section between Pensacola, Florida, and the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway to be supplied to provide a connected, national system of inland waterways which will benefit more than thirty states.

A few months ago, this Commission asked Major General Lytle Brown to allow the physical survey of the link to connect Choctawhatchee Bay and West Bay, Florida, to be made, so that this canal could be constructed while the equipment is in the Pensacola district, as this would be economy for the Government. We are advised by Major Sharrer, District Engineer, that this survey is now in progress. With this link constructed, there will then be an inland waterway route from Carrabelle, Florida, westward to New Orleans, and Texas, and up the Mississippi System, when the Pensacola-Mobile Canal is finished. We are closely watching all matters. We confidently believe that our project will be approved for construction within the next two years, as the Pensacola-Mobile Canal is to be completed during the year 1933, and recent industrial development at Pensacola and Panama City, and at other points along the Gulf Coast, shows the great need for the early completion of our project, and that it will be of national importance. The Engineer Board asked all interested communities to file data, and Colonel Youngberg is now compiling the data to be filed for the city of Jacksonville, Florida.

Columbus, Georgia, and Atlanta, Georgia, have asked the War Department and Congress to provide an inland waterway route from those cities to New Orleans, by improving the Chattahoochee River. From the Apalachicola River westward, their projects will use the route of our canal; and the route across the Florida peninsula, to the east, can also carry their commerce to and from Atlantic States,—which all adds to the showing that the construction of our project will be more than justified, and it can also be used by the Government Barge line to carry balanced freight between the Mississippi Valley and Atlantic states.

The Senate passed our bill—Senate Bill No. 48—at the regular Session in 1929, carrying all appropriations as requested by the Commission, but, due to the mass of legislation in the House of Representatives, the bill was never voted on in the House of Representatives, in 1929. The Senate was good enough to again pass our bill—as Senate Bill No. 35—at the Special Session of 1929, but, again, it was delayed in the House of Representatives and not passed. So, to gain time for the State of Florida on this important project, Chairman Ruge again advanced money to pay general operating expenses (except salary of the secretary), and the secretary carried on the work as directed by the Commission, and we are glad to report that material gains have been made, in spite of unexpected opposition and other handicaps. The Commission, in our present bill, Section 1, has asked your Honorable Body to authorize an appropriation to refund the personal money thus advanced by members of this Commission, as the Legislature has done heretofore (see Acts of 1925 and 1927). The Commission has endeavored to safeguard the Emergency Fund asked for under Section 5 of our 1931 bill, and it will be used only in meeting the requirements of the War Department and Congress. In acquiring the right of way for this canal it may be necessary to clear the title to some of the land, and extra legal services may be needed. We believe that this project is now more than three-quarters of the way to success; and this Commission respectfully asks that the Legislature will make it possible for the Commission to finish the job with the least possible delay, for the benefit of the State of Florida.

This canal will virtually extend the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway, and the Florida East Coast Canal, to the Mississippi River, and also extend the Texas-Louisiana Canal and the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway, including the Pensacola-Mobile Canal, to the Atlantic inland route. Tampa and all of the West Coast can use this canal to the greatest advantage to reach the Atlantic states and also reach the Mississippi Valley states and Texas. The route across the Florida peninsula, and the width and depth of this canal, will be determined by the War Department. It is expected, however, that the link east of Saint George Sound, across the peninsula to a connection with the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway and/or Atlantic Ocean, will be constructed as a combined barge-and-ship canal so as to accommodate both kinds of traffic, that the benefits to the United States may be as great as possible; and the Commission has asked the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association of Louisiana and Texas,—all of which are developing barge routes,—to lend their aid and influence that the larger project may be secured, as it will prove to be the nation's greatest asset, throughout all future years.

Attached to this report, and made a part thereof, is a folder containing special information and also a list of endorsements of the proposed Atlantic, Gulf and Mississippi Canal secured by the Florida State Canal Commission. A copy of this folder was recently sent by the Commission to all members of the Florida Legislature, also to many other persons, in other states, and it has been distributed at waterways conventions.

This Commission has earnestly endeavored to take advantage of every opportunity to advance this important project, and will continue to do so, and exercise the utmost economy that will secure the desired results for Florida.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN G. RUGE, Chairman,
E. W. BAILEY,
FLORENCE A. S. PHILLIPS,
Members Florida State Canal Commission.

(This Folder is made a part of the Report of the Florida State Canal Commission.)

Washington, D. C., Aug. 11.—(A. P.)—A 3,000-mile Federal intracoastal chain of salt waterways stretching along the major portion of the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts from Boston to the Rio Grande is rapidly becoming a reality.

This lusty young grandchild of the sea, when full grown, is expected to present to the Atlantic seaboard and the Gulf States a service of cheap and dependable transportation.

The northernmost link is the Cape Cod Canal, extending across Cape Cod from Cape Cod Bay to Buzzards Bay. From Buzzards Bay, a connection which requires no special improvement, the intracoastal project moves along the coast by way of Long Island Sound to New York Bay.

Thence the chain cuts the neck of New Jersey to follow the Raritan River and the privately-owned Delaware and Raritan Canal to the Delaware River.

An exhaustive study of the question of providing a Federal waterway across the State of New Jersey is under way.

The channel then traverses Delaware and Maryland to the head of Chesapeake Bay. The Chesapeake and Delaware Canal has been completed by the purchase and conversion of the old privately-owned canal. From the Chesapeake flows the Norfolk-Beaufort waterway, which has been substantially completed. It provides a channel with a depth of 12 feet for a distance of about 198 miles.

A project for a 12-foot channel along the coast from Beaufort, N. C., to the Cape Fear River, near Wilmington, is approximately 20 per cent completed.

For the section from Cape Fear River, North Carolina, to Charleston, the Secretary of War has transmitted to Congress the recommendation of the chief engineers for a waterway, eight feet deep and seventy-five feet wide. From Charleston, by way of Beaufort, N. C., and Savannah, a channel has been completed to the St. Johns River, Florida. Work has been going on several months on the intracoastal waterway from Jacksonville to Miami.

A survey of a waterway from Cumberland Sound on the east coast of Georgia and Florida to the Mississippi River is in progress.

West of the Mississippi River, Congress has authorized construction of an intracoastal waterway from the Mississippi at, or near, New Orleans, to Point Isabel on the Rio Grande by way of Corpus Christi, Texas. Preliminary examination of this link is now being made.

(By permission of Major General Lytle Brown, Chief of Engineers, and the Associated Press.)

The Special Committee appointed in pursuance of motion made by Senator Hilburn to draw an appropriate resolution commemorating the birthday of Jefferson Davis offered the following report:

JEFFERSON DAVIS—A TRIBUTE

The following report is made by the committee, composed of Senators King, Clarke and Gary:

One of the most misunderstood names in history is that of Jefferson Davis. Misunderstood—yes—to those who read and interpret history through their prejudices—but never misunderstood by those who really knew the man; the Leader of the "Lost Cause" that was never lost. The answer is "They loved him best who knew him best."

Born in Kentucky, educated at West Point, distinguishing himself in the Black Hawk Indian War, wounded on the field of battle in Mexico; appointed Brigadier General by the President of the United States, his distinguished military services have been overshadowed by his later career.

In the giant days of the United States Senate when voices of men like Webster, Clay, Calhoun and Douglas, Houston and Benton fulminated and thundered over the tremendous problems that presented themselves, Jefferson Davis, in ripe scholarship, native ability, true oratory and stainless character, stood in the very front, and did as much to influence legislation as any man of his time.

Serving four years as Secretary of War under President Franklin Pierce, he introduced many reforms in the army service and at West Point, and it is conceded by those competent to judge that he was one of the ablest secretaries that the War Department ever had. When his term as Secretary of War expired, in 1857, he re-entered the Senate, having been elected again by the Legislature of Mississippi. It was during this period of his career that he made most earnest efforts to preserve the Union under the Constitution of our fathers. But when the end came, and his State seceded from the Union, he retired from the Senate, and after an eloquent farewell address, which has been pronounced one of the classics of the times.

The history of the Confederacy is the record of Jefferson Davis, its first and only President. There can be no doubt that he discharged the duties of the office with ripe experience, rare ability and patriotic devotion. At the close of the war he was arrested and sent to Fortress Monroe, where he was imprisoned, and to the eternal disgrace of the Federal Government, put in irons. After two years confinement, he was released on bail, and the indictment against him for treason never brought to trial. He was regarded as a "vicarious sufferer" for his people, and the verdict of history can be expressed in no more fitting terms than the words of his beloved helpmate, Varina Howell Davis, who wrote his memoirs, in which she presents him as he was—"the great soldier, marked and fitted for more than fame; the citizen, fashioned in the old faithful type; the Christian, who was a lover of all high and righteous things."

After his release from Fortress Monroe, his health failed, and the enfeebled body of the Chieftain of the Confederacy, so wasted by confinement and prison food, battled with the vicissitudes of life for a few years, and then came the last act of the drama—when the noble heart of Jefferson Davis was stilled.

"Man dies but his memory lives," and the name of Jefferson Davis shall ever awaken an answering thrill in Southern breasts, as long as history shall last, and so long as the songs of Dixie Land shall be sung.

It can be said of him, when he departed he took a man's life with him. No sounder piece of Southern manhood was put together in all the annals of time. He died a martyr to the Cause he loved, and his epitaph could well be written, and the verdict of history epitomized in the language of a great poet:

"Ever the truth comes uppermost and ever is justice done.
For humanity sweeps onward; where today the martyr stands,
On the morrow crouches Judas with the silver in his hands.
"Far in front the cross is planted, and the crackling fagots burn,

While that hooting mob of yesterday in silent awe return
To gather up the scattered ashes into history's golden urn."

The principles he believed in are the doctrines of democracy today. The principles of resistance to the encroachments of Federal powers against the rights of the States are as sacred and imperative as they were in the Sixties. We believe that the white people of the South are one people with those of the North; that they have the traditions; the same blood; the same love of freedom, and the same lofty resolve to preserve their race unpolluted and free.

The unmistakable danger that threatens free government in America, is the increasing tendency to concentrate in the Federal Government powers and privileges that neither the State nor Federal Government should have. Jefferson Davis realized this danger in his day, and the people of the South owe him a debt of gratitude, which could not be paid though a monument were erected to his memory higher than that which rises in the sunlight, above Potomac's wave. Though his voice has long been stilled, his example, and his patriotism shall be cherished in the hearts of many generations.

A few days ago, according to press dispatches, the Federal Government placed in the Hall of Fame under the dome of that marble Capitol at Washington, the statue of Jefferson Davis—a belated tribute to one who suffered much for principles he held to be dearer than life itself.

FRANKLIN O. KING,
19th District.

Which was read.

Senator King moved the adoption of the report and that it be spread upon the Senate Journal in full.

Was taken up and read a second time in full.

Senator Young moved that the rules be further waived and House Bill No. 592 be read a third time in full and put upon its passage.

Which was agreed to by a two-thirds vote.

And House Bill No. 592 was read a third time in full.

Nays—Senators Adams, Bradshaw, Gomez—3.

So the bill passed, title as stated.

And the action of the Senate was ordered to be certified to the House of Representatives under the rule.

Senator Bell moved that the rules be waived and the Senate do now take up the consideration of House Joint Resolution No. 27 out of its order.

Which was agreed to by a two-thirds vote.

And—
