STATE OF FLORIDA
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR
Tallahassee

May 10, 1961

*Honorable W. Randolph Hodges
President of the Senate
Capitol Building
Tallahassee, Florida*

*Honorable William V. Chappell, Jr.
Speaker, House of Representatives
Capitol Building
Tallahassee, Florida*

Sirs:

For many years and from many quarters a need has been expressed for revision of many of the articles of our Florida Constitution in order that it may most effectively serve to guide our destinies through times of prosperity and of peril.

Its framework, over the 75 years of its service, has been augmented with literally dozens of amendments, adding to the complexity of its interpretation but doing little to modify or remove those sections no longer applicable because of our growth or the advances of our times. A clear need exists today to make the alterations required for a clear statement of basic principles and adaptation of the document to modern conditions.

Resolutions proposing revision of many of the most important articles of the Constitution have been prepared and introduced in both houses by the chairmen of the Senate and House Constitutional Amendment Committees, and I commend each of these proposals to you for careful scrutiny and for your favorable consideration.

The form of the revision of these articles results from the composite thinking of many men and women who have given years of study to this important work. Many of you have participated in the development of each, and many of you have shared with many others throughout Florida a feeling that this work has for too long remained unaccomplished. The approval of these article revisions will long stand as a shining mark upon the record of this Legislature and as tangible proof of its desire that Florida shall stand at the forefront of the states with precepts of government compatible to the times clearly stated for the benefit of her citizens.

Of particular importance are these proposed changes in the present constitution, which I present in the order in which they appear in the constitutional structure rather than in the order of their importance:

(1) In condemnation proceedings the Legislature is authorized to provide that in cases in which public agencies condemn road or canal rights of way benefits to adjoining land may be offset against severance damage to property not taken.

(2) The boundaries of the state have heretofore been stated in very general language. The importance of fisheries and submerged minerals make it vital that our boundaries be extended to the maximum legal limit.

(3) The tendency of municipal and metropolitan courts to handle more important criminal cases, which is often conducive to efficiency, has resulted in the denial of jury trials in many cases of such gravity as to endanger the basic purposes of our judicial system. One resolution proposes to guarantee that the right of trial by jury be extended to all cases wherein the maximum punishment is a fine of over $300 or a sentence of over thirty days.

(4) The present highly desirable practice of the houses of the legislature meeting informally shortly after the elections and selecting their officers should be made official. This will improve the efficiency of the legislature.

(5) Modern conditions make it important that, under proper safeguards of the public interest, state and county officers be permitted temporary leave of absence for service in the armed services or other defense agencies of the Federal government.

(6) The office of Lieutenant Governor is needed, and he should be elected as part of a team of which the Governor is captain and should serve as an assistant to the Governor. In keeping with this, clarification of succession to the office of governor is in order, with the succession passing first to the Lieutenant Governor, then to the President of the Senate, then to the Speaker of the House. A provision has been included that these men become Governor instead of acting Governor.

(7) Reform is needed in the process for the removal of officers not subject to impeachment. It is suggested that the procedure be established by which an officer may be suspended by the Governor, but the suspended officer should have the right within thirty days to demand a public hearing on the charges made against him. If he fails to demand such hearing, he stands automatically removed. The hearing, if demanded, must be held before the Governor or a member of the Cabinet and all evidence supporting the removal must be presented. The officer may offer evidence. After this hearing, the Governor must make a further order either reinstating the officer or affirming the suspension. A record of the proceeding is made and filed with the Secretary of State for the use of the Senate in considering this removal, but the Senate may take additional evidence if it desires. It is believed that this procedure offers greater protection to all interested parties, including the public.

(8) Home Rule has been the subject of much discussion and much difference of opinion. It is recommended that the Constitution authorize the legislature, by local law not inconsistent with general law, to extend the ordinance-making power to boards of county commissioners with proper safeguards to protect municipalities. Under such a provision, the counties may within the limits of their local legislation experiment in this field and in those counties where it meets popular approval this authority may be enlarged within reasonable limits.

(9) The provision for the preservation of the State School Fund is changed under those recommendations so as to permit the use of the principal of this fund for capital outlay for institutions of higher learning.

(10) The Railroad and Public Utilities Commission is a body of such importance that it should have the status of constitutional recognition, although the number and method of selection of its members, and its powers and duties, should be fixed by the legislature. Its name might be shortened to Public Utilities Commission.

(11) The problem of the best method for amending and revising the Constitution has been the subject of much study. It has been proposed that the legislature be authorized to propose a revision of the entire Constitution which would become effective upon vote of the people. One reason there has never been a revision of the present Constitution by convention is the limitation of the membership of a convention to the representation of the various counties in the House of Representatives and the fact that there is no provision for submitting a proposed revision to the electorate. It is essential that the power to amend the Constitution through a convention be preserved, but with these safeguards: The convention should consist of a number of delegates equal to the representation of the people in the House of Representatives and in the Senate; that a proposed revision be submitted to a legislature elected after its proposal and be subject to amendment by three-fifths vote of each house at that legislature, and be submitted to the people for ratification. For the purpose of securing a better arrangement for the subject matter of the Constitution, the legislature should be authorized to propose by three-fifths vote mechanical changes in the Constitution which are certified by the Supreme Court as having no effect on the meaning of the Constitution, and which become effective without the vote of the people.

One of the most important objects of revision of any part of the Constitution as it now exists, is the elimination of provisions which have been superseded by amendment, have expired by their own limitations, or which for other reasons are in no way desirable at this time as part of the fundamental law of the state. I will mention but a few of these.

There are several provisions authorizing the legislature to enact laws on certain subjects. Unless forbidden by the Constitution, the legislature has the power to enact any law on any subject. Such provisions are therefore needless and should be deleted.

The Constitution of Florida still provides for the election by the legislature of United States Senators, although under the Federal Constitution, they are elected by the people.

We still have a provision in the Constitution giving the legislature the power and making it its duty to exclude from the franchise a man who is the second to either participant in a duel or who shall be the bearer of a challenge to a duel.

Since we have, for all practical purposes, done away with the special tax school district, the Constitutional provision for these bodies is no longer needed except to preserve those districts having outstanding bonds until their debts are paid.

The Legislature is still required by the Constitution to appropriate at least $500 a year for the purchase of books for the Supreme Court Library.

Expired provisions for tax exemption to new industries and motion picture studios, and a provision, superseded by a later amendment, fixing the salaries of state officials on the basis of the economy of 1885 are still parts of the Constitution.

These and many other unnecessary provisions should and will be eliminated when the proposed articles are adopted by the legislature and approved by the people.

These resolutions have been so prepared that no impairment of any right and no substantial loss of any constitutional provisions would follow any combination of approvals and rejections by the people.

The amendments pending before you dealing individually with the Declaration of Rights, the Preamble and Articles I, II, III, IV, VI, VII, IX, XII, XVI and XVIII constitute a long step forward in the clarification of our governmental guidelines for the benefit of legislators, administrators, jurists and the public generally. I look forward to the completion of your action on each and to the final stamp of approval I am confident the people of Florida will supply by their endorsement at the polls.

Sincerely,
FARRIS BRYANT
Governor
