to finance the cost thereof in whole or in part by the issuance of revenue obligations; providing an effective date.

Proof of Publication attached.

—and requests the concurrence of the Senate therein.

Respectfully,
ALLEN MORRIS
Clerk, House of Representatives

Evidence of notice and publication was established by the Senate as to HB 1989.

HB 1989, contained in the above message, was read the first time by title and referred to the Committee on Rules and Calendar.

On motion by Senator Poston, the President appointed Senators Poston, Gong, Haverfield, Weissenborn, Shevin, Hollahan, Myers, Fincher, Stone and Chiles as a committee to escort Miss Barbara Goleman, Florida and National Teacher of the Year, to the rostrum where she addressed the Senate as follows:

There are many baffling mysteries permeating life on this planet: the great and awesome mystery of the creation of human life, the infinite complexities of a man's brain, the variegated beauty of the world of nature, the splendid mystery of God.

And, to one like me, caught up in the ironies of the human predicament, there are the perplexing mysteries of the paradoxes of the human spirit:

Man's capacity for sadistic cruelty and for self-sacrificing love, for self-defeating bigotry and for soul-expanding tolerance, for malignant hate and for ennobling compassion—capable of pretrating the atrocities of war and envisioning dreams of peace—invested, somehow, with the skill to invent a devastating weapon of destruction and the inspirational wonder of a work of art. That sophisticated electronic miracles can now implement instantaneous contact between continents, that we have now thrust through barriers of outer space, of fathoms of sea-water, with x-ray insight probed the activating cells of human life—and yet cannot transcend the barriers of distrust and fear to effect personal communication—remains the most plaguing mystery of all.

And it is on this subject that I—at this particular moment in my life—feel most compelled to speak. Had I been left to my own motivation, I should never have chosen myself as a national spokesman for the classroom teacher. But, you know, a funny thing happened to me on the way from the White House. I had gone through the agonizing torment of the private person conscientiously avoiding the public spotlight—was tempted to retreat to the relative isolation of my own personal life and the still rather private beauty of the classroom encounter. And I found myself apologizing—in public appearances—for the undeserved honor I was being accorded. And then—one of my students asked me to stop apologizing—and a letter from my seniors encouraged me to say the things that needed to be said.

So I have changed. In the course of these weeks of beautiful ceremonies, of newspaper interviews and television tapings, of school visitations and countless moving personal encounters, I have experienced within the last few weeks: a warm personal encounter with the President of our Nation; a positive dialogue with a sincerely eloquent group of peaceful college protestors; the thrill of observing individuals “doing their own thing” as they worked in private and public agencies in Harlem, trying to expand the horizons of children spawned in the cruel ghetto; conversations with drug addicts trying to fight their way out of their barbed-wire trap of addiction, with its accompanying human degradation; warm, human encounters with personalities of the stage world: Margot Fonteyn, Rudolf Nureyev, Pearl Bailey (who embarrassed me by calling me up on stage), and James Earl Jones, the award-winning actor who was concerned about schools and kids today and took time to write personal notes to my students; the full spectrum of Broadway, from Hamlet to Hair (and found, surprisingly, a remarkable similarity in theme as youth struggles—recklessly—against the establishment to realize dreams of love and hopes for peace; visits to classrooms in our nation's capital where I found beautifully committed, young, dynamic teachers struggling to overcome the now-familiar deficiencies of antiquated buildings, inadequate equipment, and too often, a prestigious community withdrawing its children from the public school into more impressive private institutions; the opportunity to engage in a colloquy with Congressmen on topics of poverty and student unrest.

In short, I have traveled from the White House to the college campus to the ghetto, from the bowery to Gracie Mansion and, right now, two encounters stand out as highlights. One: Being the member of a studio audience observing a confrontation between 3 college students, all activists, and 3 parents, with daughters and sons in college. The startling effect of this encounter to me was this: the students—young, idealistic, articulate, rational in their arguments, and, yes, impatient—could not penetrate the barrier of hostility generated by the parents, who in some cases maliciously tore at the students in some kind of fearful antagonism—begotten, I suppose, by the basic insecurity of their own position. The hostility, to those of us in the audience—the resentment—was a palpable thing. In a day when very few things are truly shocking, I was shocked—and saddened. And it is this same fear, distrust, resentment, that is the true subversive element eating away at our society. If indeed there is subversion at work to corrode the foundations of the democratic experiment, it has to be that which encourages the polarization of groups within our greater community. The end result: blacks rebel against the unquestioned injustices of whites, past and present; whites react—with equal vengeance—against the black rage; teachers rebel against what they feel is public apathy; the public, in turn, wreaks its counter-vengeance.

Labor-management, student-administrator, educator-public, legislator and legislated, each squaring off into an alienated ring of separation.

Why cannot human beings reject the fear, the temptation for reprisals, the distrust of one another and take the positive, constructive stance of trust, simple, common trust in one another's basic impulses.

Socrates once commented that he believed all men wished to be good, the difficulty lay in determining what was good. And I believe this. I do not understand why those parents could not open their hearts and minds to those young people. Why they could not simply trust the sincerity of impulse throbbing in those students even while, perhaps, lamenting their methods. I cannot understand the violence of the hatred now being directed toward the young who are choosing their methods of saying there's something wrong here in America. The vengeance aimed at frustrated and impatient teachers even though I, too, have disagreed as to course of action or the vitriol heaped upon legislators, even now. (I even trust the basic sincerity of our legislators.)

I have a strong distaste for violence on any side of an issue. A repugnance for militaristic stances, for the bully, be he lawmaker or student or teacher or community leader.

I do believe in the meaningful exchange of rational ideas through dialogue—and that means trust and that means listening not just shouting.

I believe the true conspiracy is that which divides us, which stimulates us to act out of fear and insecurity and hate rather than their counterparts.

The second experience permanently etched in my memory was returning home from the Washington ceremonies to a group of students and teachers, a 100-piece band, cheerleaders, majorettes, posters, placards, songs, cheers, ribbons, flowers, speeches, all keyed to a triumphant celebration that the “impossible dream” had indeed been realized and recognized.

For the students and teachers and staff of my school found themselves launched on a course testing the courage of their commitment to the real American dream—and they, we found, not an intolerable hardship—but a beautiful human experiment.

I find now that I am glad that a Southerner is a Teacher of the Year. I hope that the South will rise again to defeat its degrading stereotype and assert its leadership in the greatest experiment ever undertaken by any nation.

And I pray that my state will assert its role as a positive voice amid all the chaos dominating the American scene.

I am a part of this state. It bore me, bred me, taught me my ideals and dreams and aspirations. I hope that I shall represent it well.

On motion by Senator Poston, the foregoing remarks of Miss Goleman were ordered spread upon the Journal.

SPECIAL AND CONTINUING ORDER

SB 628 was taken up, together with:

By the Committee on Ways and Means—

CS for SB 628—A bill to be entitled An act authorizing the issuance and sale by any county, municipality, special district, or other local governmental body of revenue bonds to finance or refinance the cost of capital projects for industrial or manufacturing plants; providing that such revenue bonds shall be payable solely from revenue derived from the sale, operation, or lease of the projects; providing for the terms, security, and payment of such bonds; vesting powers in such local governmental bodies respecting such projects; exempting from taxation certain property, income, and bonds of such local governmental bodies; providing an effective date.

—which was read the first time by title and SB 628 was laid on the table.

On motions by Senator Gong, the rules were waived and CS for SB 628 was read the second time by title, the third time by title, passed and certified to the House. The vote was:

CS for HB 1037—A bill to be entitled An act relating to political parties; amending section 103.111(2) and (3)(a), (b), (f), Florida Statutes, providing for the organization of county executive committees; providing an effective date.

Was taken up, having been amended and retained on second reading May 14.

Senator Weissenborn offered the following amendment:

In Section 1, lines 13-31; 1-14, pages 1 and 2, strike: all of section 1, and insert the following language in its place:

Section 1. Subsection (2) of section 103.111, Florida Statutes is amended to read: (Substantial rewording of section. See section 103.111(2), Florida Statutes, for present text.)

103.111 State and county executive committees.—

(2) The state executive committee of each party shall consist of two (2) men and two (2) women elected from each congressional district, plus the president of the senate, or senate minority leader (whichever is applicable), and the speaker of the house or house minority leader (whichever is applicable). Members of the state executive committee from the congressional districts shall be elected by vote of the chairmen of the county executive committees of each county within each congressional district. In the election of executive committee members, the vote of each county chairman shall be weighted by a factor equal to the proportion of registered party voters in his county compared to the registered party voters in the entire congressional district; provided that if the number of registered party voters in any county exceeds twenty-five percent (25%) of the total of registered party voters in the congressional district, one

(1) person from that county shall be automatically entitled to be elected as a member of the state executive committee. Each member of the state executive committee shall be a registered voter of the party within the unit of representation from which elected or appointed, and each member shall be entitled to one (1) vote. The officers of the state executive committee will be selected by the entire membership of the state committee.

Senators Myers and Lane offered the following substitute amendment which was moved by Senator Myers and failed:

In Section 1, lines 13-31; 1-14, strike all of section 1, and insert the following language in its place: 103.111 State and county executive committees.—
