

Comptroller and Attorney General, upon the various points connected with our Common School System, will, doubtless, receive, as they deserve, your careful attention.

The accompanying Reports of the State Treasurer and Comptroller, show a highly favorable and encouraging state of our finances, and I would invite the consideration of the General Assembly to the views and opinions of the Comptroller, in regard to some of the features of our revenue system. His information, experience and opportunities of forming a correct opinion upon such subjects would, alone, give much weight to his suggestions; but I am strongly impressed with the propriety of his views, on principles of justice and equity.

The Report of the Register of State Lands exhibits a decided improvement in the resources of the funds which they constitute, by a higher average of sales than heretofore, and which may, in a great measure, be attributed to the enactments of the last General Assembly.

The Report of the Quartermaster General shows the condition of the public arms. There being no State Arsenal for their safe-keeping, the care of them is attended with increased expense to the State; which should, if possible, be remedied, by the erection of a public depository.

My opinion in regard to the period when my constitutional term of office should commence and terminate has been fully expressed—is of public record, and remains still unchanged. When, therefore, my successor shall be "chosen and qualified," my official duties will cease.

With the assurance, gentlemen, of my hearty co-operation with you in all Constitutional measures, having for their end and object the public weal, and wishing you an agreeable and useful session,

I am, your fellow-citizen and obedient servant,

THOMAS BROWN.

In taking the yeas and nays, and upon the call of the Senate, the names of the members shall be taken alphabetically.

RULE 18.
