I. SUMMARY:

The bill amends s. 768.095, F.S., to immunize employers from liability for disclosing information about current employees, as it already does for disclosing information about past employees.

The bill also requires a former or current employer, or their agent, to provide the complete employment record and any other verifiable information relating to whether an applicant fails to meet certain job qualifications to a law enforcement officer, who is conducting a background examination of the applicant for temporary or permanent employment or appointment as a full-time, part-time, or auxiliary law enforcement, correctional, or correctional probation officer with a law enforcement employing agency. The law enforcement officer conducting a background examination of an applicant is required to present his or her credentials and an authorization for release form to the former or current employer.

The bill additionally provides for a release of information form and includes a non-criminal penalty provision (up to $500 fine) for persons failing to comply with the background investigation requirements.

The bill shall become effective upon becoming law.

II. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS:

A. PRESENT SITUATION:

Release of Information to Prospective Employers

Currently, s. 769.095, F.S., provides employers with civil immunity when providing information about a former employee's job performance to a prospective employer. The employer is presumed to have acted in good faith unless the former employee shows by clear and convincing evidence that the information was knowingly false, deliberately misleading, rendered with malicious purpose or violated the former employee's civil rights under chapter 760, F.S.

Release of Information to Prospective Law Enforcement Employers

Section 943.133, F.S., currently requires an "employing agency" as defined in Chapter 943, F.S., to collect, verify, and maintain documentation establishing an applicant's compliance with the job qualifications provisions of ss. 943.13 and 943.131, F.S. Section 943.133, F.S., requires the Criminal Justice Standards and Training Commission to promulgate rules relating to the relevant forms and the background check that must be undertaken by an employing agency of an applicant for a position as a full-time, part-time, or auxiliary law enforcement officer, correctional officer, or correctional probation officer. Section 943.133, F.S., does not provide any disclosure requirements for current or former employers of an applicant.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

Section 1 of the bill will amend s. 768.095, F.S., to broaden the immunity from liability for information disclosed by an employer about a former employee to a prospective employer, to apply also to information disclosed about current employees.

Section 2 of the bill will require a former or current employer, or their agent, to provide the complete employment record and any other verifiable information relating to whether an applicant fails to meet certain job qualifications to a law enforcement officer who is conducting a background examination of the applicant for temporary or permanent employment or appointment as a full-time, part-time, or auxiliary law enforcement, correctional, or correctional probation officer with a law enforcement employing agency. The law enforcement officer conducting a background examination of an applicant is required to present his or her credentials and an authorization for release form to the former or current employer. The bill also provides for a release of information form and a non-criminal penalty of a fine of up to $500 for persons failing to comply with that section.

V. COMMENTS:

Comments by the Committee on Judiciary

Section 2 of the bill will mandate disclosure of the complete employment history and other relevant information by former and current employers of an affected applicant. This provision does not afford these employers any right to seek reasonable payment for the preparation of such information or provide these employers with any immunity, as is provided in section 1, while imposing a monetary penalty on those employers that do not comply with the bill.

By imposing fines on private employers who fail to provide background employment information on their current or former employees, the bill effectively "coerces" such employers to serve as information sources for law enforcement. This coercion is maintained outside of either the judicial system or any licensing/regulatory system created by statute.

Comments by the Committee on Governmental Operations

The second amendment adopted by the Committee on Judiciary provides for a blanket immunity from all causes of action to employers who provide background employment information to law enforcement, even if they knowingly provide false and defamatory information about an employee. To avoid such a result, it may be desirable to provide immunity from liability for voluntary disclosure of employment information to law enforcement in the same manner as sec. 768.095, Florida Statutes.

VI. AMENDMENTS OR COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE CHANGES:

On April 5, 1999, the Committee on Judiciary adopted two amendments, which are traveling with the bill. The first amendment removes the word "shall" requiring employers to provide employment information to law enforcement, substituting the phrase "is encouraged to" instead. The second amendment provides blanket immunity from all claims to the employers and their agents who disclose background employment information to law enforcement and allows such employers to seek reimbursement from law enforcement for the cost of any records produced under the bill.
