I. Summary:

The committee substitute creates a public records exemption for certain information related to reports of unclaimed property submitted to the Department of Banking and Finance. The social security number and the financial account numbers of apparent owners of the abandoned property would be confidential and exempt. However, an attorney, certified public accountant, or private investigator licensed in Florida would continue to have access to the social security number, if the information was used for the limited purpose of locating unclaimed property or unclaimed property owners.

The committee substitute provides that the exemption of this information from public records is necessary to prevent identity theft, related crimes and the misuse of such information to claim entitlement to property and defraud the rightful property owner or the State. The release of this confidential and exempt information to an attorney, a certified public accountant or a private investigator is necessary to facilitate the return of unclaimed property to the rightful owners.

This committee substitute creates yet to be designated sections of the Florida Statutes.

II. Present Situation:

The Florida Disposition of Unclaimed Property Act (Ch. 717, F.S.) provides the statutory procedure for the escheat (reversion) and disposition of presumed abandoned property to the state. Generally, all property, real and personal, and every right of property of any nature are subject to escheat to the State. The general purpose of the Act is to protect the interest of missing owners of property while the State derives a benefit from the unclaimed and abandoned property until the property is claimed, if ever. See s. 717.139, F.S. There is no statute of limitations period for an owner to claim his or her property.

The Department of Banking and Finance administers the Act. It is responsible for receiving property, locating the rightful owners, and returning the property (or its value, in cases of sold securities) to them. The department is required to make only a one-time attempt to notify owners of unclaimed property. See s. 717.118, F.S. The department may use post, print, visual, telecommunications, or electronic media, with the exception of publication on the Internet, to satisfy the one-time notice requirement. Owners are not charged for the department's cost in notification or recovery of the property.

Unclaimed property constitutes any funds or other property, tangible or intangible, that has remained unclaimed by the owner for a certain number of years. Unclaimed property may include savings and checking accounts, money orders, travelers' checks, uncashed payroll or cashiers' checks, stocks, bonds, other securities, insurance policy payments, refunds, security and utility deposits, and contents of safe deposit boxes. Holders of unclaimed property, which typically include banks and insurance companies, are required to submit unclaimed property to the department. A check, draft, bank deposit, stock, as well as other intangible property, is presumed abandoned if unclaimed for a period of 5 years. Notable exceptions to the 5-year period include contents in safe deposit boxes (3 years), money orders (7 years), and travelers' checks (15 years).

Once the allowable time period for holding unclaimed property has expired, a holder is required to file a verified report with the Department of Banking and Finance by May 1 for all property presumed abandoned for the preceding fiscal year. In lieu of forms, the holder may submit the required information via electronic medium as the department may prescribe by rule. Within 120 days prior to the filing, a holder must mail a written notice to the apparent owner of such property (valued at $50 or more).

Under the provisions of s. 717.117, F.S., the report to the department generally must contain the name and social security number or federal employer identification number, if known, and the last known address of the apparent owner.

Within 13 months after receipt of the holders' reports, the department must attempt to locate the apparent owner of property valued at or above $100 by publishing or televising a notice in the county in which the last known address of the apparent owner is located or, if the address is unknown, in the county in which a holder has a principal place of business.

In addition to the efforts by the department to locate the owners of unclaimed property, private investigative agencies and attorneys assist apparent owners in recovering unclaimed property. Private investigative agencies are required to be licensed by the Florida Department of State, in accordance with ch. 493, F.S. Typically, an owner's representative will contact apparent owners of unclaimed property and offer to complete and file the necessary forms with the department for a fee.

In 1973, the Attorney General opined that the records maintained by the Abandoned Property (Unclaimed Property) Section of the Department of Banking and Finance were public records and were open to public inspection. (AGO 073-167)

Public Records Exemptions

Section 119.15, F.S., the Open Government Sunset Review Act of 1995, provides for the repeal and prior legislative review of any public records or public meetings exemptions that are created or substantially amended in 1996 and subsequently. The law states that an exemption may be created or expanded only if the exemption:

- Allows the state or its political subdivisions to effectively and efficiently administer a governmental program, which administration would be significantly impaired without the exemption;
- Protects information of a sensitive personal nature concerning individuals, the release of which would be defamatory or cause unwarranted damage to the good name or reputation of such individuals, or would jeopardize their safety; or
- Protects information of a confidential nature concerning entities, including, but not limited to, a formula, pattern, device, combination of devices, or compilation of information that is used to protect or further a business advantage over those who do not know or use it, the disclosure of which would injure the affected entity in the marketplace. (See s. 119.15(4)(b), F.S.)

Article I, s. 24(a), Florida Constitution, provides, "Every person has the right to inspect or copy any public record made or received in connection with the official business of any public body, officer, or employee of the state, or persons acting on their behalf, except with respect to records exempted pursuant to this section or specifically made confidential by this Constitution."

Article I, s. 24(c), Florida Constitution, permits the Legislature to create exemptions from a public records law. However, the bill must contain a statement of public necessity that justifies the exemption and the exemption must be no broader than necessary to accomplish its purpose. Additionally, a bill that contains an exemption may not contain other substantive provisions, although it may contain multiple exemptions that relate to one subject.

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

Section 1. Provides that social security numbers and financial account numbers contained in unclaimed property reports, submitted to the Department of Banking and Finance, as required under s. 717.117, F.S., are confidential and exempt from s. 119.07(1), F.S., and s. 24, Art. I of the State Constitution. This section would be subject to the Open Government Sunset Review Act of 1995 in accordance with s. 119.15, F.S., and would stand repealed October 2, 2006, unless reviewed and saved from repeal through reenactment by the Legislature.

Section 2. Provides that the Legislature finds that the exemption from public-record requirements provided in this act is a public necessity to prevent identity theft and related crimes. The exemption of the social security number and financial account numbers of apparent owners is necessary to prevent such information from being used in forged documents demonstrating entitlement to abandoned property and thereby defrauding the rightful property owner or the State School Fund. The release of this confidential and exempt information to attorneys, certified public accountants or private investigators is necessary to facilitate the return of unclaimed property to the rightful owners.

Section 3. Provides that this act would take effect July 1, 2001.

IV. Constitutional Issues:

A. Municipality/County Mandates Restrictions:

None.

B. Public Records/Open Meetings Issues:

None.

C. Trust Funds Restrictions:

None.

V. Economic Impact and Fiscal Note:

A. Tax/Fee Issues:

None.

B. Private Sector Impact:

The exemption would protect individuals reported as apparent owners of unclaimed property from potential identity theft and other misuses of personal and financial information.

Heir finders use these reports to solicit business from individuals that have been reported as apparent owners of property. By allowing the heir finders to retain access to the social security numbers, the heir finders would continue to be able to solicit business from apparent owners of unclaimed property.

C. Government Sector Impact:

Indeterminate. The department would be responsible for ensuring that the social security numbers and financial accounts that are contained in the reports remain confidential and exempt and the department would no longer be required to provide access to such records, except to attorneys, certified public accountants, and private investigators. Currently, persons requesting such reports are charged a copying fee.

VI. Technical Deficiencies:

None.

VII. Related Issues:

CS/SB 1398, relating to unclaimed property, revises reporting requirements for holders of unclaimed property and revises requirements for recovery services (heir finder) agreements to include the option to disclose specified information or to limit fees to 15 percent for all contracts with a dollar value of $250 or more or $25 for all contracts with a dollar value of less than $250.

VIII. Amendments:

None.

This Senate staff analysis does not reflect the intent or official position of the bill's sponsor or the Florida Senate.
